Have you ever thought about writing? Have you ever said to yourself that you want to write? Here is your chance. A chance to see what happens when you actually let your mind create. And to share that process with other like-minded intrepid explorers – Explorers who are finding their way - or losing themselves in thought – Sometimes both at the same time.

If you have thought about writing, what better time than now to begin as you step in to the world of medicine, intense, overwhelming, exhilarating, isolating, rewarding, surprising. Creative writing can help us work through tension and turmoil, relieving stress. It can provide a refreshing break from the constant pressure of never enough time, and leave us with newly found energy. Come, play, explore, investigate, open up your world through creative writing.
